EIGHTH ANNUAL REPORT

TO THE

RIGHT HON. VISCOUNT PALMERSTON,

HER MAJESTY'S PRINCIPAL SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE HOME DEPARTMENT.

BOARD OF SUPERVISION FOR THE RELIEF OF THE POOR IN SCOTLAND, CHAMBERS, GEORGE STREET, EDINBURGH, August 1853.

MY LORD,

EIGHTH ANNUAL REPORT.

WE have the honour to submit the General Report of our proceedings for the past year. Since the date of our last Annual Report, the Visiting Officer of the Board has investigated the manner in which their duties are performed by the Parochial Officers in all the Parishes of the Counties of Haddington, Berwick, Roxburgh, Selkirk, Dumfries and Kirkcudbright, and has reported to the Board the observations he had to make upon each. The general result of his inquiries has satisfied us that the Poor are well attended to and generally adequately provided for in those counties. Proceedings of Board.

The Visiting Officer has also examined and reported upon the condition and management of the Poorhouses in Greenock, Govan, New Monkland, the Barony Parish of Glasgow, and Falkirk, and has conducted special investigations, rendered necessary by complaints transmitted to us, in the Poorhouses of the Barony Parish and of St Cuthberts—as well as in regard to complaints preferred against the Inspector of Girvan. The arrangement by which an Officer has been specially appointed to this duty has fulfilled our expectations of advantage to the public service.

The Chairman of the Board has conducted a special inquiry in Caithness regarding the administration of the Poor-laws in that County. His report is printed in the Appendix. Appendix (A.) No. 1.

It has been our painful duty to dismiss the Inspectors of two Parishes, and we have accepted the resignation of two Inspectors whose conduct was under investigation. Having found that Inspectors who could not speak Gaelic had been appointed by the Parochial Boards in Parishes where English was not generally spoken or understood by the poorer classes, we adopted on the 13th April 1848, a minute requiring that in Parishes where it was considered necessary to conduct public worship in Gaelic, the Inspector should be able to speak that language. In the course of the past year a case occurred in which the qualification in this respect of the person appointed Inspector was questioned by some of the members of the Parochial Board, and asserted by others. We required the Inspector to repair to Edinburgh for the purpose of being examined as to his fitness for the office, but he preferred tendering his resignation, which was accepted. Inspectors.

Since the date of our last Report, 9 Parishes which had previously raised the funds for the relief of the Poor by voluntary contributions, have resolved to raise those funds by assessment. The number of Parishes now assessed is 680, and the number that raise the funds by voluntary contributions is 202. The Parochial Boards of 8 Parishes have resolved to change the mode of assessment or Assessments.

Eighth Annual Report.

of classification formerly adopted. In 4 of these we have sanctioned the proposed change, and in 4 we have refused to sanction it. Of the Parishes in which we have sanctioned a change, 2 have adopted the first mode with classification, instead of the third mode; one has adopted the first mode instead of the second; and one has adopted the first mode instead of an assessment upon the valued Rental.

The progress of the change from voluntary contributions to assessment during the eight years that have elapsed since this Board was formed, has been as follows:—

	Assessed.	Voluntary contributions.
August 1845,	230	650
... 1846,	448	432
... 1847,	558	322
... 1848,	600	280
... 1849,	625	255
... 1850,	644	236
... 1851,	653	228
... 1852,	671	211
... 1853,	680	202

In the 882 Parishes and Combinations into which Scotland is now divided, the Funds for the relief of the Poor are raised in the following manner:—

1st Mode, with Classification,	110
Do., without Do.,	457
2d Mode,	29
3d Mode,	35
According to established usage,	49
Assessed Parishes,	680
By Voluntary Contributions,	202
Total,	882

The number of Parishes assessed on means and substance is less by 3 than it was last year, though the whole number of Parishes assessed has been increased by 9.

Poorhouses.

We have approved of resolutions to erect Poorhouses in the Parishes of Inveresk, Latheron, Dundee, and Kelso, in the Upper Nithsdale combination consisting of 9 Parishes, and in the Linlithgow combination consisting of 8 Parishes, making a total of 21 Parishes with an aggregate population of 129,319.

We have also approved of the erection of a new Poorhouse in Old Machar, in place of that now in use.

We refused to sanction the establishment of a temporary Poorhouse in the Parish of Girvan, being of opinion that we could not sanction the establishment of a temporary Poorhouse in any Parish until the Parochial Board should have resolved to erect a permanent Poorhouse.

We have approved of the proposed sites for Poorhouses at Inveresk, Dumfries, Latheron, Dundee, Linlithgow combination, and Old Machar, and of the plans of the proposed Poorhouses for Dumfries, Inveresk, and Latheron, as well as the plans for additions to or alterations of the Poorhouses of Paisley, Dunfermline, and St Cuthberts.

We have considered it advisable to require that before Inmates shall be placed in a new Poorhouse or in any addition to an existing Poorhouse, the sanction of the Board should be obtained; and we have further required that every application for that sanction shall be accompanied by certificates, in a prescribed form, from a competent medical man and a respectable architect, as to the fitness of the house in every respect for the reception of inmates. In conformity with this resolution we have sanctioned the occupation of the Rhins of Galloway and the Kirkpatrick Fleming combination Poorhouses, and of part of that of Govan as well as of the additions to the Poorhouses of Falkirk and Paisley. The number of such houses now in operation is therefore 26.

Appendix (A.) No. 3.

Besides the Parishes that either singly or in combination have erected Poorhouses for their own use, 13 Parishes have acquired, since the date of our last Report, a right to send paupers to the Poorhouses belonging to other Parishes.

A considerable number of Parishes have applied to us to sanction arrangements with one Parish only of a combination, by which they were to acquire the right of boarding their Paupers in the combination Poorhouse at a rate of charge accepted by and payable to the particular Parish with which the arrangement was concluded; but we were of opinion that the House Committee to which the management management of the House is entrusted, and who are therefore responsible for the proper treatment of the Inmates, must concur in any such arrangement before we could advantageously sanction it. We have, therefore, required that every such application shall be transmitted to us through the House Committee of the Poorhouse in which it is proposed to board the Paupers.

The registration of the religious persuasion of the Inmates of Poorhouses, and the religious instruction of orphans and deserted children, have again been brought under our consideration, in consequence of complaints connected with those subjects. In our Sixth Annual Report (p. vii.) we stated that, in reference to similar complaints, we had expressed our opinion "that all children ought to be registered as belonging to the religious persuasion of their parents or surviving parent, when that is known or can be ascertained; unless in cases of desertion by their parents or surviving parent, who in that case appeared to us to have voluntarily abandoned the natural right to conduct the religious instruction of their offspring." We have now found it necessary further to intimate our opinion that when the religious persuasion of a child, even though deserted, has once been inserted in the Register, the Parochial Board has not power to alter the Register for the purpose of describing that child as of another religious persuasion, without the child's consent, and that, with reference to religious instruction, effect must be given to the original registration in the manner described by the Statute, and the Rules and Regulations for the Management of Poorhouses.

The number of Parishes that have Poorhouses either singly or in combination is 62, and when the Poorhouses now in progress are completed will be 88. There are also 120 Parishes with a population of 577,049 which, during the last year, and under the 65th Section of the Poor-law Amendment Act, have availed themselves of the existing accommodation, by boarding paupers in the Poorhouses of other Parishes. The total population to which Poorhouse accommodation was last year available amounts to 1,442,735, or one-half of the population of Scotland.

The following tables show the number of Poorhouses in operation and in progress:—

Medical Relief.

We have completed the arrangements for the fifth distribution of the Parliamentary Grant of L.10,000 in aid of Medical Relief to the Poor in Scotland. 600 Parishes resolved to comply with the conditions annexed to participation in the grant, but of these only 560 have established their claims by producing vouchers for the required amount of expenditure from their own funds, and otherwise satisfied us that the conditions of the grant have been fulfilled. Last year 599 Parishes had resolved to participate, but only 549 established their claims. The increase this year in the number actually participating is therefore 11. The detailed account of the distribution, showing the amount expended on Medical Relief in each Parish, for which vouchers have been produced, the sum apportioned to it from the grant, and the additional sum, proportioned to its vouched expenditure assigned out of the unappropriated shares to each participating Parish will be found in the Appendix. The whole sum expended on Medical Relief to the Poor last year according to the returns, was L.21,737 : 6 : $8\frac{3}{4}$, which is equal to 1·80 pence per head of the population of Scotland in 1851. According to the census of that year, the population of the Parishes and Combinations that have resolved to comply with the conditions annexed to participation in the grant is 2,301,970 and of the Parishes that have not so resolved, 586,772. The sum expended on Medical Relief by the former was L.19,577 : 5 : $6\frac{1}{4}$, equal to about 2.04 pence per head of the population; and that by the latter was L.2,160 : 1 : $2\frac{1}{2}$, equal to about 0.88 pence per head of the population of those Parishes.

Appendix (B.) No. 8.

Insane and Fatuous Paupers.

The number of cases of Lunatic Paupers, in which application has been made to us to dispense with removal to an Asylum, during the year ending May 1853, has been 169. In 165 cases we have dispensed, and in 4 cases have refused to dispense with removal to an Asylum. In the year ending May 1852 the number of such cases was 194.—In 191 of these we dispensed, and in 3 refused to dispense with removal to an Asylum.

A building has been erected at Baldovan, near Dundee, at the private cost of Sir John and Lady Jane Ogilvy, for the purpose of being used as an institution for the cure of imbecile and idiot children, in the mode recommended and pursued with great success by Dr Guggenbuhl of Abdenberg, Interlaken. The institution will not be endowed, but will be maintained, partly by subscriptions and voluntary contributions, and partly by the board paid for the pupils. It is proposed to receive pupils of two classes at different rates, and it is thought probable that the Directors may be able to receive poor children at a rate so moderate, that in many cases Parochial Boards may send pauper children to be instructed there with ultimate advantage, even in a pecuniary point of view. It is hoped that the institution—the first of the kind that has been established in Scotland—will be ready to receive patients in the course of the next summer, before which time it is understood that the rates of board will be fixed, if not absolutely, at least within certain limits. We do not doubt that many pauper children who, by treatment in such an institution, might have been made capable of maintaining themselves, have, for want of such means of instruction, remained helpless burdens on their Parishes throughout their lives.

Complaints of Inadequate Relief. Appendix (B.) Nos. 2 and 3.

The number of applications complaining of Inadequate Relief that have been before us during the year ending 30th June 1853 has been 705. In the preceding year the number was 684.

Cost of Relief and Management. Appendix (B.) Nos. 4 and 5.

The sum expended for the Relief and Management of the Poor during the year ended 14th May 1853, including L.22,176 : 15 : 0¼ expended on Poorhouse Buildings and General Sanitary Measures, has been L.544,552 : 19 : 9. In the preceding year the expenditure for the same purposes was L.535,868 : 9 : 10½. There has therefore been an increase in the expenditure, of L.8,684 : 9 : 10½. The following table presents a comparative statement of the sums expended for the Relief and Management of the Poor for the last eight years, arranged under the different heads of expenditure, together with the rate per head of the population calculated for the first five years on the census of 1841—and for the last three years on the census of 1851. The rate per cent. on the annual value of real property, as returned to Parliament in 1843, is also stated.

Eighth Annual Report.

Number of Poor.

Appendix (B.) No. 6.

The number of Poor on the Roll or Registered on the 14th May 1853, was 75,437, being an increase of 326 since the same date last year, but a decrease of 3,594 since the 14th May 1850, and of 1,469 since the same date in 1851. The number of Poor who have died or ceased to receive relief during the past year, was 24,172—making the whole number of persons relieved by order of the Parochial Boards, 99,609. For the previous year the corresponding number was 99,637. The number of casual Poor or persons relieved by the Inspector without an order from the Parochial Board, was 49,658, being an increase as compared with the preceding year, of 3,627. On the other hand, the number of casual Poor relieved on the 1st January 1853, was 4,951, or 343 less than on the 1st January 1852,—and on the 1st July 1853, the number was 4,706, being 364 less than on the same day in 1852. The average annual increase of the population appears by the census of 1851 to have been, for the preceding 10 years, about 26,855,—which, unless in peculiar circumstances, may be presumed to imply a progressive increase in the number of the Poor.

The following is a Statement of the number of Poor relieved in Scotland, according to the returns received by this Board.

Period.	Population	1. Number of Registered Poor relieved during the year ended at date.	2. Number of such Poor who died or ceased to receive relief.	3. Number of Poor on Register at date.	4. Number of Casual Poor relieved during the year.	5. Number of Casual Poor relieved on 1st Jan.	5. Number of Casual Poor relieved on 1st July.	6. Number of Poor refused relief.	7. Decision in the House of Lords.

In our last Report we had occasion to refer to difficulties arising from a recent decision in the Court of Session. A subsequent decision in the House of Lords has relieved us from the more serious of those difficulties.

Church Collections Appendix (B.) No. 7.

The whole sum derived from Church Collections in assessed Parishes during the year ending May 1853, was L.14,022 : 5 : 8¼; of which L.8,135 : 8 : 3 is stated to have been expended on relief of the Poor. From this sum, however, must be deducted L.324 : 18 : 5¾ handed over to the Parochial Boards. It would appear, therefore, that the sum of L.7,810 : 9 : 9¼ derived from Church Collections, was actually applied by the Kirk-sessions, to the relief of persons in their respective Parishes who required assistance. But these funds are generally employed to afford aid to persons who have fallen into temporary difficulties, with a view to prevent them from becoming chargeable to the Parish as Paupers; and it is doubtful whether any of the persons so assisted, have also been chargeable to the funds raised by assessment.

Free and Pauper Colonies of Holland. Appendix (A.) No. 2.

We have printed in the Appendix a Report upon the Free and Pauper Colonies of Holland, communicated by Sir John M'Neill, who visited them for the purpose of enabling him to convey to the Parochial Boards accurate information as to the results obtained by the employment, in those colonies, of indigent persons of good character and paupers, in agricultural labour and manufacturing industry.

Applications to Sheriffs. Appendix (B.) No. 1.

Returns of the legal proceedings under the Statute, in the Sheriff Courts, have again been furnished to us by the courtesy of the Sheriffs Substitute, and are to be found in the Appendix.

While it appears that the number of applications to the Sheriff, on the ground that relief had been improperly refused, is somewhat increased, as compared with the year immediately preceding; it is satisfactory to observe, that there is nevertheless a considerable diminution in the number of those in which the Sheriff felt called upon to grant interim orders of relief, as well as of those in which the Applicants

Applicants were found, on inquiry, entitled to be admitted to the Roll of Paupers. During the year ending 30th June 1853, the number of these interim orders was 426, whereas in the preceding year it had been 503, and in that year the number was lower than it had ever been before. During the year ending 30th June 1853, the number of Applicants admitted to the Roll of Paupers, by final order of the Sheriff, was 92,—a smaller number than in any former year—while in the immediately preceding year the number was 137.

Eighth Annual Report.

Applications to Sheriffs. Appendix (B.) No. 1.

Correcting these returns (which, in some respects, admittedly afford only an approximation to the actual numbers) by the General Abstract of Poor relieved, furnished by the Inspectors, it appears that, while during the past year, 7,045 persons have been refused relief by the Inspector or Parochial Board, no more than 368 were subsequently admitted to relief, either by order of the Sheriff, or from the apprehension of such an order; being a decrease of 31 as compared with the immediately preceding year, when the number was lower than in any year since the passing of the Poor Law Amendment Act.

Appendix (B.) No. 6.

The Sheriffs' returns appear in other respects to require no special comment. The number of prosecutions, under the 79th and 80th sections of the Statute, has been 224, and of convictions 166, exclusive of the district of Aberdeen, where no record is kept. The average number of such prosecutions, in the six preceding years, was 217; and of convictions 148.

Applications to the Inclosure Commissioners for advances under the Emigration Advances Act have been transmitted to us by the Trustees of the following properties in the Western Highlands and Islands, viz., Lord Macdonald's and the Skeabost properties in Skye, and the Glengary property in the Parish of Glenelg. In each of these cases we have certified, in terms of the Act referred to, that the proposed emigration from the property is expedient.

DOCUMENTS COMMUNICATED TO, AND ISSUED BY, THE BOARD OF SUPERVISION.

No. 1.

Report by Sir John M'Neill.

Caithness.

REPORT by Sir JOHN M'NEILL, G.C.B., Chairman of the BOARD OF SUPERVISION, on the Administration of the POOR LAWS in CAITHNESS.

IN pursuance of the Board's minute of the 9th September 1853, I proceeded to Caithness and met the parochial boards of Wick, Cannisbay, Dunnet, Olrig, Thurso, and Latheron. I did not meet the parochial boards of Halkirk, Watten, Bower, or that part of the parish of Reay which is in Caithness.

Before proceeding to report upon the administration of the poor laws and its moral effects in Caithness, it may be expedient to give some general idea of the condition of the working classes in that county.

The inhabitants of Caithness are distinguishable into two divisions commonly called the highland and the lowland, which it will be proper to notice separately, because their origin, language, habits, and modes of life are different.

The highland population occupies the western and more mountainous part of the county, along the borders of Sutherland, in the parishes of Reay and Latheron, and more partially in Halkirk. Their character, language, habits, and modes of life, seem to be similar to those of their highland neighbours further to the west, from whence indeed a large proportion of them migrated into Caithness. They are almost exclusively engaged in agricultural and pastoral occupations, and, to a large extent, hold crofts or small farms in the same manner as their countrymen towards the west coast, and with the same results. Their numbers have increased more rapidly than the means of subsistence; and of all the inhabitants of the county they are the poorest and the least progressive. Their habitations are far from the coast, except at the two extremities of the line they occupy, and comparatively few of them engage in fishing. They are rarely found amongst the quarrymen; and they are not in great favour with the employers of agricultural labourers. When removed to crofts on the sea coast they have not been successful, and have been unable to pay the rents which the lowlanders of Caithness were able to pay, and yet to prosper. But, latterly, a larger proportion seem to have betaken themselves to fishing, either in boats of their own or as hired assistants; some have emigrated; a considerable number annually go south in quest of temporary employment; and their system of husbandry is said to have somewhat improved,—more especially where they are in contact with the lowland population, and have become intermixed with them.

The lowland division occupies the much more extensive and more fertile part of the county which extends in one great plain, varied here and there by inconsiderable undulations, from the hills to the sea coast. They are believed to be of Scandinavian and Teutonic origin—do not speak Gaelic—and are hardly distinguishable by their language or appearance from the inhabitants of the more southern counties on the east coast of Scotland. They are an active, energetic people, who prosecute successfully the laborious occupations in which they engage. These are chiefly fishing, agricultural labour for hire, and quarrying. Nearly the whole sea coast of the county, including the towns of Thurso and Wick, is inhabited by persons more or less directly dependent upon the fisheries. In the rural parts, the fishermen have generally attached to their dwellings small farms or lots as they are called, varying in extent from two to ten acres of arable land. These, however, do not afford them the chief part of their subsistence. They rely upon the fisheries, and regard the cultivation of their lots as a secondary and comparatively unimportant part of their business.

At the end of the last century, the value of the cured fish annually exported from Caithness did not exceed L.13,000, and it then consisted almost exclusively of salmon. The cured herring, cod, and ling, exported from Wick and Lybster for the last ten years, gives an average annual value of not less than L.130,000, according to the returns of the Board of Fisheries. The annual value of the whole land in the county was returned in 1843 at L.66,000. The population in 1841 was 36,343.

The Caithness fisheries have thus not only become a source of prosperity to the county, but have also become an object of national importance; and their further extension appears to be in a great measure dependent upon the increase of suitable harbour accommodation for the boats engaged in them. Harbours more or less secure have been formed from time to time at different creeks along the coast, from Wick southward, and the number of boats appears to have increased in the ratio of the accommodation provided for them. There is no reason to believe that the limit has yet been reached, or that if the harbour accommodation were increased, the fisheries, more especially of herring, would not receive a corresponding development. But even now the population of the county is not nearly sufficient to supply the demand for hands during the fishing season, and some thousands of men from the

the west coast, find in Caithness, during that season, employment and wages without which they could not subsist. The increase of harbour accommodation in Caithness, besides increasing the general amount of production, would thus afford additional employment to the inhabitants of the west coast and islands of Inverness, Ross, and Sutherland, who frequent the east coast fisheries, because they cannot find sufficient employment at home.

The quarries of Caithness also afford employment to a considerable number of persons, and conduce to the prosperity of the county. The trade in Caithness pavement, which is but of recent origin, has already become considerable, and employs a large amount of tonnage. The difficulty that has this year been experienced in obtaining a sufficient number of vessels to carry the flags to the different markets, has for the moment retarded its development, but this difficulty will no doubt speedily be overcome; and as it is already not easy to obtain at all times as many hands as are required in the quarries of Castlehill and the other extensive works of the same description, it is evident that there is no deficiency of employment in Caithness.

Amongst the cheering evidences of social progress, none is more agreeable than the improvement in the dwellings of the working class, which is going on in some parts of the county. The cottages of the quarrymen of Castlehill, though perhaps hardly affording a sufficient number of apartments, are very far in advance of the dwellings of the preceding generation. Some of them are models of cleanliness, neatness, and comfort, and convey irresistibly the impression of domestic welfare.

Concurrently with the development of the valuable resources derived from the seas and the rocks of Caithness, there has been, and still is, a great amount of agricultural improvement in progress, which affords constant employment to considerable numbers of the working classes, and more especially in those parishes of the lowlands which are not favourably situated for the prosecution of the fisheries. Crofts have been consolidated into large farms, and an improved system of husbandry has been carried out, by means of the capital of the proprietors, and the wealthier and more skilful tenants who replaced the crofters. The amount of waste land that has been reclaimed is very large, and as such operations are persevered in, it must be presumed that they have been found remunerative. On almost every property agricultural improvement in some form is in active progress, and the condition of some of the farms, and even some whole estates, is such as would be considered creditable in any part of the kingdom. In the progress of this improvement, the small crofter has almost disappeared, and has been replaced by the farmer, and by the labourer for wages, who holds no land. But most of the proprietors have wisely preserved a limited number of small farms, of from thirty or forty to sixty or seventy pounds of annual rent, which industrious and frugal agricultural servants may hope to acquire the means of taking advantageously on lease; and which the large farmer, perhaps more than any one else, is interested in preserving. These small farms are so many prizes for industry, frugality, and good character, held out to the men whom he employs. They form the ladder by which the agricultural labourers may ascend, and see that they may ascend, to the level of the class whom they are serving.

The lots or crofts held by fishermen are, as has been stated, subsidiary to their principal occupation. There are however some exclusively agricultural crofters still remaining, even in the lowlands of Caithness, where the people are most energetic; and as that county, for the last sixty years, has exported grain in considerable quantities, it may be presumed that its climate is favourable to agriculture. It was evidently desirable, with reference to the conclusions at which I had arrived in the course of the inquiry, conducted in the Western Highlands and reported to the Board in 1851, to ascertain how far the accuracy of the information upon which those conclusions were founded was confirmed or invalidated by the experience of Caithness. I therefore addressed to the parochial boards which I had the pleasure of meeting, and which were numerously attended, questions similar to those which I had addressed to the persons examined in the West Highlands, with a view to determine the minimum extent of land on which a lowland Caithness man can maintain a family and pay the ordinary rent per acre, from the produce of his farm or croft. The difference in the character and habits of the people—in the general agricultural skill of the smaller tenants—and in the climate of the country as well as in the facilities of intercourse with the more advanced districts and the great centres of intelligence and improvement;—and the greater length of time during which those facilities had been enjoyed—all led me to anticipate a very considerable difference in the result of my inquiries; but I found that the answers given to my questions in Caithness were almost identical with those which had been given in Skye and everywhere else upon the west coast.

The parochial board of Wick stated, that "the smallest croft on which a man can maintain a family and pay his rent from the produce of the land alone, is a lot of about fifteen acres of arable, with hill pasture, for which he would pay a rent of about L.15. He would have three cows with their followers till two or three years old—in all from eight to ten head of cattle; three acres in green crop and grass, three or four in bere, and the remainder in oats. Bere returns in favourable situations about eight seeds, that is, eight bushels for each bushel of seed, and oats about four. All tenants paying less than L.10 of rent draw the means of paying rent either wholly or partly from fishing, carting, or labour of some sort, other than on their own land. The fishing lots on the coast are from two to ten acres, and let at from L.1 to 30s. per acre. In some cases the lotters have leases of their lots; but in these they are bound to deliver their fish at 1s. per cran below the Wick price, that however being the usual rate on the coast."

The parochial board of Dunnet stated, that "less than forty acres, arable and pasture, will not enable a man to maintain a family and pay his rent from the produce of the land alone.

alone. All under that amount are necessarily maintained partly by the wages of labour or produce of fishing. A man who has only five acres draws the chief part of his subsistence from labour or fishing. The produce of a five-acre croft may maintain a family" (from harvest) "till April, if the potatoes succeed. The capital required to enable a man to take a forty-acre farm and pay his first year's rent free from debt, is not less than L.136. The population is not redundant. On Mr Traill's property there is some difficulty in getting a sufficient number of hands. On the entailed property of the township of Freswick there is less employment."

The parochial board of Olrig were of opinion that "it is utterly impossible for a man holding only ten acres of land to maintain his family and pay the current rent per acre without engaging in labour for wages or in fishing. The smallest extent of land on which a man can maintain a family and pay the current rent of the country is about thirty acres."

The parochial board of Thurso were of opinion that "the smallest extent of land on which a man could maintain a family and pay his rent from the produce of the land alone is such a lot of land as, at the current rate of the country, would let for L.20 of annual rent, whether it be forty acres worth 10s. per acre, twenty acres worth L.1 per acre, or ten acres of very superior land worth L.2 per acre."

The parochial board of Latheron stated, that "a croft in that parish let at an annual rent of L.10, contains about eight acres of arable. The crofter will have about twenty head of cattle of all ages, two horses, and from forty to fifty sheep. Very few men holding such a farm can maintain a family and pay the rent from the produce of the land alone. Nearly all are under the necessity of seeking for employment for wages, or engaging in fishing or some other occupation by which something may be gained."

From these statements it appears that, without the addition of a considerable range of hill pasture, a man in Caithness is unable to maintain a family and pay the current rent of the country from the produce of ten acres of arable land of average quality; that, to enable him to do so without the addition of hill pasture, he would require to have about twenty acres of arable land of average fertility; and that where persons holding a much smaller extent of land are able to maintain themselves, it is because agriculture is not their principal occupation or the main source of their subsistence.

The parochial boards for the relief and management of the poor in Caithness appear to be composed of a very intelligent and well-informed body of men possessing habits of business, and exhibiting that kind of diversity in their views and opinions which prevents stagnation and promotes success and purity in the administration. In the towns of Wick and Thurso the boards are numerous, and the differences of opinion, especially in the former, more obvious. In the country parishes, the proprietors and the ministers, together with the farmers and traders who are elected members of the parochial boards, bring to the administration of the poor-laws an amount of intelligence and knowledge of the condition of the people which is more than sufficient to carry out the purposes of the legislature and of the Board of Supervision; but hitherto their attention had not been sufficiently directed to the changes effected by the statute of 1845, and some of the duties required of the parochial authorities by that statute and by the rules of the Board of Supervision had been but imperfectly performed. I found everywhere, however, a cordial disposition to carry out such improvements as were suggested, and a desire to apprehend and act upon the principles on which I recommended that the administration should be conducted.

All the Boards were of opinion that the increased facilities which the change in the law in 1845 had afforded for obtaining parochial relief had produced a perceptible relaxation in the exertions of partially disabled persons to maintain themselves, had induced many who had been in the habit of aiding their poor relations, and were still able to do so, to throw the burden of their maintenance wholly upon the parish, and had greatly impaired the disposition formerly manifested to aid parents and descendants, whom persons are by law bound to maintain. But it does not appear that there has been any general relaxation in the industry of the able-bodied part of the population who are not by law entitled to demand relief; and as an evidence of that fact, it may be stated that the deposits in the savings banks were increasing. In illustration of the diminished industry of partially disabled persons, it was stated by the parochial board of Wick that "many women who formerly were anxious for "employment in spinning yarn for nets would not now accept employment, but subsisted "on their parish allowances."

The parochial board of Cannisbay were "decidedly of opinion, that the effect of the "legal provision for the poor has been to relax industrial exertion and to produce more "carelessness and improvidence, as well as to weaken the bonds of natural affection."

The parochial board of Dunnet say, that "industry is relaxed on the part of the par-"tially disabled. They now come upon the parish in circumstances where formerly they "would have found means to maintain themselves. Children are less inclined to maintain "their parents; even those who have money will not do so unless forced. The confidence "that there is a fund from which they must be maintained, leads to improvidence. There "is greater improvidence since the new law came into operation. It has had a demoralizing "effect, especially in weakening the bonds of natural affection, and facilitating improvident "marriages. Some have boasted that they could marry, because they have the parish to "fall back upon."

The parochial board of Olrig state that "there is an increasing disposition to throw "the burden of maintaining their parents upon the parish. In some cases, children who "would formerly have maintained their parents will not now contribute anything towards "their support."

The parochial board of Thurso stated that "the partially disabled have become less "industrious

Appendix (A.) No. 1.

Report by Sir John M'Neill.

Caithness.

"industrious. Children are less disposed to maintain their parents. Improvidence is "increasing; and, on the whole, the effects of a legal provision for the poor have been "demoralizing."

The parochial board of Latheron are of opinion that, "since the recent statute came "into operation, the industry of partially disabled persons has certainly relaxed; but they "are not of opinion that reliance upon parochial relief has injuriously affected the habits of "the people generally, in respect to economy and providence. The disposition of persons "in good circumstances, as labourers or hired servants, to throw the burden of maintaining "their parents and poor relations upon the parish, is universal. Even persons holding farms "at a rent of L.30, make attempts to get placed on the roll relations whom they are bound "by law to maintain. One case has occurred, of a man paying about L.400 a year of rent, "who tried to get a person whom he is bound by law to support placed upon the roll of poor."

The prevalence of a disposition, such as is described in the foregoing statements, no doubt arises partly from misapprehension as to the objects of a legal provision for the poor; and is partly the necessary effect of any such provision. But it was obviously important to the future welfare of the population, that all available means should be adopted to disabuse them of their misapprehensions, and to counteract the tendency to evil, which is inherent in a compulsory provision for the poor, and which, to a greater or less extent, everywhere counterbalances its advantages.

It was pointed out to the parochial boards, that the successful administration of the poor-law in this country, mainly depends upon the vigilance of the parochial board and its officers, and upon their careful examination of each case not only when it first comes before them, but with reference to every change of circumstances. That although the expense of prosecuting a person who, having the requisite means, fails to maintain his dependants, might exceed the saving to the parish in that particular case, it is necessary to make examples with a view to deter others from a similar dereliction of duty, and evasion of their legal obligations. That if the gentlemen upon whom the legislature has imposed the duty of administering the poor-law, and whose interests as rate payers are most affected by its operation, chose to evade the performance of that duty, and found that their interests suffered in consequence, it would not do to attribute to the law the inconveniences which arose from their neglect of the means which had been put into their hands for their own protection. That amongst the most efficient and legitimate means of protection against abuse was the erection of poorhouses, to which they had not yet resorted; and that in many parishes, not in Caithness only but throughout Scotland, the parochial boards had resorted to the thriftless economy of having inefficient officers at inadequate salaries. That it rested with themselves to apply the appropriate remedies to these defects, and that they owed it not less to the conservation of the moral character of the people residing upon their properties, than to a regard for their own interests, to set seriously and actively about the means of counteracting the evils with which they were threatened.

The parish of Latheron had taken into consideration the expediency of erecting a poorhouse, and the Board are aware that they have already made some progress towards that end. In several of the other parishes it appeared that the expediency of erecting a poorhouse had been a subject of conversation, rather than of formal discussion; but since that time the subject has been under consideration at the parochial boards, and there is every reason to believe that an extensive combination of parishes for the purpose of erecting a common poorhouse, either has been or speedily will be formed.

I may be permitted to hope that my visit to Caithness has tended to direct the attention of the intelligent parochial boards of that county to some defects in their previous system, which will now be removed, and to some improvements which will be carried out. —Reported by, JOHN M'NEILL.

Report by Sir John M'Neill on Free and Pauper Colonies in Holland.

REPORT by Sir John M'Neill, G.C.B., on the Free and Pauper Colonies in Holland.

During the last four years a considerable number of the parochial boards in Scotland have been led to consider the expediency of employing the partially disabled poor on agricultural labour, and of acquiring by purchase or taking on lease land for that purpose. It was believed that the labour of such persons in agriculture would be more productive than in the various occupations which can be carried on in a poorhouse. On several occasions I was consulted by members of parochial boards to which some such plan had been proposed, and the pauper colonies of Holland and Belgium were more than once referred to as illustrating the advantages of the proposed system. I was aware that several writers of considerable weight, both of this and other countries, had considered those colonies as worthy of imitation, and that nearly all the tourists and travellers who had visited them had come to a similar conclusion; but I was also aware that some of our highest authorities on questions of social economy, regarded them as erroneous in principle and deprecated any attempt to imitate them in the United Kingdom.

In the spring of this year, finding it necessary to make an excursion for the benefit of my health, I resolved to visit the colonies in North Holland, with a view to satisfy myself, by personal observation and inquiry, how far any similar system of providing for the poor might be adopted with advantage in Scotland. The Dutch colonies had been in operation for above thirty years, and the results of the experiment might now therefore therefore be ascertained. Besides inquiring into the moral effects of the system, I directed my attention to the relative expense of maintaining the poor in those colonies, and according to the ordinary modes of relief; and also to the comparative productiveness of pauper labour directed to agriculture, and directed to manufactures and handicrafts, such as may be carried on in a poorhouse.

By the kindness of Sir Ralph Abercromby, Her Majesty's envoy at the Hague, I was put into communication with the Baron Von Hoorn Von Burgh, who is charged with the general administration of the pauper colonies, and had an opportunity of conversing with some of the foreign ministers who had given particular attention to the subject. Every one appeared to be desirous, on personal as much as upon public grounds, to meet Sir Ralph's wishes; and the warm interest he took in the matter, more especially as it regarded Scotland, with whose history his family and the name he bears, are inseparably connected, obtained for me the most courteous assistance from the public authorities concerned in the administration of those establishments. The same influence obtained for me answers to a series of queries which I was permitted to address to the administration of the colonies, and a great number of tables illustrating their statistics, for which I cannot sufficiently thank the Baron Von Hoorn Von Burgh, who was kind enough to have them prepared for me.

About the year 1817, the General Van-den Bosch, a man of great talents, energy, and philanthropy, conceived the idea of relieving Holland from the evils of extensive pauperism and mendicancy, and at the same time of reclaiming that class of persons, and training them to habits of industry, by employing them in agriculture. He appears to have set out from the position that if the savage man, without having instruction, implements, habitation or capital provided for him, could make the earth yield him the means of living, much more would the indigent classes of civilized men, provided with all these advantages, be able to maintain themselves by tilling the soil. He thence inferred that able-bodied indigent persons of good character could be made self-sustaining by employing them to reclaim waste land, provided funds could be obtained to purchase the waste land and to maintain the families employed upon it until it became productive. He believed that by occupation in agricultural labour under the training and discipline of a well-regulated establishment, the moral character and the habits of that class of persons might be greatly improved, and that they would give employment to industry in supplying their wants, instead of being as they then were, a burden upon the community.

He proposed to effect these objects by the formation of a society which should raise by subscription the funds required to purchase a suitable property on which to plant a colony of able-bodied indigent persons of good character, and to advance a part of the funds requisite for their establishment. The communes, hospitals, and individuals who desired to send such persons to the colony, were to pay for each family of six persons,—father, mother, and four children,—1700 florins (L.141, 13s. 4d.) in annual instalments, which might be extended over sixteen years, the society undertaking in consideration of that payment to provide for the family in future; and in the event of their death or removal to receive another family without any additional charge, except an entrance fee of fifty-one florins, sixty-five cents (L.4, 6s. 1d.) If the family did not number four children, that number might be completed by the addition of orphans or deserted children.

The plan was received with great favour both by the country and the government. The Prince Frederick became the patron of the society,—the King and the royal family gave large contributions,—the wealthier classes of the community subscribed liberally. In the first year the subscribers numbered 21,000, and the subscriptions amounted to 55,368 florins (L.4614). In the second year they had increased to above 59,000 florins—land was purchased and operations were commenced. The land was divided into portions or lots of three bunders equal to $7\frac{7}{10}$ imperial acres, on each of which a house was to be built for the family destined to occupy it. After experiments made for the purpose of ascertaining the amount of labour required to bring the land into tillage, it was calculated that the sum of 1700 florins to be paid with each family would cover the cost of house, furniture, implements, maintenance and all other charges for the family, until they should be able to maintain themselves from the produce of the $7\frac{7}{10}$ acres of land assigned them. Each occupant of a lot would then become a free peasant subsisting by his own agricultural industry, and paying to the society a small rent for the land, which would, however, be a sufficient return for the capital invested in its purchase.

The property purchased for this purpose by the society, consisted of above 1200 bunders, or about 3000 acres. A small part had previously been cultivated, but in general it was covered with short heather growing on a great extent of flat, dry, sandy soil, covered with a layer of moss a few inches thick. In some spots there is a considerable depth of moss which is cut for fuel and furnishes peats of good quality, and in quantity sufficient to supply the colony. Neither the soil nor the other circumstances of the situation are favourable to the growth of wheat, and not very favourable for barley. Neither turnips nor swedish turnips have succeeded very well, and the field crops consist chiefly of potatoes, rye, and sown grasses. On a small part of the property there is timber of fair growth, oaks, beeches and pines of about three feet in circumference, and a moderate extent of thriving copse consisting principally of oak and birch with other trees intermixed. Part of this heathy flat beyond the limits of the society's property had, previously to the formation of the colonies, been brought into cultivation by small proprietors, and more extensively by tenants. These proprietors and tenants are believed to be prosperous, their small farms are certainly in good order, their horses and cattle are in good condition, and everything about them indicates prosperity on a small scale. They cultivate no grain except rye and occasionally a small quantity of oats, and they raise no root crop except potatoes, but they have a considerable part of their land in grass, and rely exclusively upon hay and straw for the winter feeding of their cattle, with a small quantity of rape cake for the cows giving milk. The success of these improvers of the heath promised success to the colonists who were to engage in a similar undertaking.

On the land acquired by the society, three colonies were formed—Frederick's Oord, William's Oord, and Williamina's Oord, the managers of which reside at Frederick's Oord. These are what are described as the free colonies—the home colonies,—or the common or ordinary colonies,—to distinguish them from the forced colonies, which were subsequently established for the reception of mendicants, vagrants, and paupers not of good character, and which will afterwards be described.

In 1818 the first house was built, and in 1819 the population of the free colonies amounted to 346—in 1820 to 1600—in 1821 to 2100—in 1822 to 2100—in 1823 to 2295—in 1824 to 2800—in 1825 to 3227; the highest number it has ever reached. In 1852 it was 2640. For the last ten years, 1843-1852 inclusive, the average number has been 2543, consisting of about 425 families, occupying as many farms or lots of $7\frac{7}{10}$ acres each.

On each lot the society built a house. They are all built on the same model, of brick, with glazed windows in the gable, and, as is usual in Holland, attached to the opposite gable is a wooden erection of the same breadth and height under a prolongation of the same roof, and from twenty to thirty feet long. This wooden structure contains a place in one corner for one or two cows, and serves both as a lobby to the house and a general store or grange. The dwelling-house consists of one apartment on the ground floor about fifteen or sixteen feet square, floored with tile or brick, and an attic over it of the same dimensions. These houses are much better built, more comfortable, and better furnished than those of the independent labourers in the same district.

The management of the society and of its colonies was entrusted to a central board at the Hague, of which the benevolent Prince Frederick agreed to become the president; a director, with assistants, a secretary, and subordinate officers, was appointed to reside in the colony to maintain discipline, direct the labour of the colonists, and conduct the local management. The requisite implements, seed, and other means of cultivation were provided, roads and canals to facilitate internal communication were constructed, schools were established for the children of the colonists, chapels were provided for the Protestants, the Roman Catholics, and the Israelites; bakeries and work shops under the charge of paid tradesmen were put in operation, a canteen or shop was opened for the sale of everything they wanted except intoxicating drinks, milk cows were purchased, of which one was attached to each family. When I visited the colony under the guidance of its very intelligent and efficient officers in May 1853, the whole 3000 acres, except some patches of wood, peat moss, and the roads and canals, were in regular tillage; the 420 houses then occupied by the colonists were clean and comfortable; the colonists well fed, well clothed, and healthy; the schools and workshops in active operation; and that great sheet of cultivation studded with its neat cottages, inhabited by numerous families possessing so much of material wellbeing, like an oasis in the desert of stunted heath by which it was surrounded, was certainly a most attractive spectacle. Had I prosecuted my inquiries no further, I should have left Frederick's Oord with the conviction that General Van-den Bosch's scheme of the free colonies had been completely successful, and that 420 families which had been a burden upon the benevolence of the community had been transformed into a prosperous colony of small farmers, enjoying the reward of their industry in an amount of comfort exceeding that of the majority of their class in the same country.

But I had gone there for the purpose of making more minute inquiries. The colony had been in operation for thirty-four or thirty-five years, and the calculation had been that after the first year or two every family would be in a position to maintain itself on its farm, independent of extraneous aid, and pay a rent of 45 or 50 florins as free tenants. In answer to my inquiries as to the number of families that had failed to arrive at that condition, I found that there were only sixteen then in the colony who had attained to it, and that of these there were only two or three who were able to maintain their families and pay their rents from the produce of their farms. I found that of those who had from time to time been advanced to that condition (on an average about one in each year since the commencement) a considerable proportion had been unable to maintain themselves in it, and had relapsed into the condition of pauper colonists. In 1848 there were twenty-five free peasants, in 1853 there are only sixteen; the other 404 families are working for behalf of the society which maintains them—yet the rent charged by the society is not equal to one half of that paid by the small farmers beyond the limits of the colony for land reclaimed from the same heath. The rent charged by the society to the free peasants or tenants is now 50 florins (L.4, 3s. 4d.) for the three bunders (or $7\frac{7}{10}$ acres), in consideration of which their houses are kept in repair, a milk cow is lent to them by the society free of charge, which when it ceases to give milk is replaced by another that gives milk, they are provided with education for their children, medical attendance and medicines, and their children can always find employment in the society's factory in the colony. The tenants of the small farms on the heath beyond the limits of the colony pay about 80 to 100 florins for three bunders, and are not supplied with a cow, with education for their children, or with medicines or medical attendance, neither can their children find employment in a factory—yet they prosper while the agricultural colonists fail to provide for their subsistence by their own labour, but on the contrary leave a large annual deficit to be supplied from other sources. The assistant director who conducted me over the colony attributed this failure to provide for their maintenance to "the inaptitude of a large proportion of the colonists for agricultural occupations, and a general want of economical habits." In reply to my inquiries he said, "It is impossible

" impossible to make the colony self-sustaining. It is very doubtful whether it would be " possible for the society to make it self-sustaining, even if the colonists were selected from " classes well suited to the occupation. An individual proprietor of activity and intelligence " might perhaps—perhaps—succeed in escaping loss by a good selection of peasants, and by " greater economy in settling them; but the certainty that the society will maintain them " whether they save or not has an unfavourable influence on their habits. There are some who " work well, but on the whole the society cannot get from them nearly so much work as " the same persons would do for an individual who did not undertake in all circumstances " to maintain them. The agricultural produce of the colony has never nearly covered the " expenses; but there is a profit on the manufactures and some of the handicrafts."

Incessant daily toil is so irksome that nothing less urgent than the necessity for such exertion to maintain life, and to satisfy the demands of the strongest of our affections, will induce the majority of mankind to persevere in it; and if we set out by assuring a man of all that is necessary to the comfort of himself and his family, whether his exertions be great or small, we take the most effectual means of reducing them to a minimum. This which, as a general rule, is true of all men, applies with still greater force to the class which by want of energy and economy has been reduced to indigence.

Regarded as an attempt to make these families maintain themselves by agricultural labour, the free colonies, after an experience of thirty-four years, are not only a complete failure, but there is no reason to believe that the scheme could possibly have succeeded. The most intelligent of the officers who conduct it are of opinion that even if the colonists had been selected from amongst the class of peasants well suited to agricultural occupations it would have been impossible to make it self-sustaining if a maintenance were secured to the colonists, irrespective of the amount produced by themselves. The failure of an experiment conducted with so much care—by men of the highest intelligence, with means so large, supported by the government and the nation, established on a scale so extensive, and persevered in for so many years amongst a people remarkable for business habits, agricultural skill and industry,—is a valuable lesson.

The society has endeavoured to compensate in some degree for the large annual deficit on the agricultural scheme by employing some of the colonists and a great number of the females and the children in manufactures. There are five weaving establishments with forty looms in each, and about 200 looms in the houses of the colonists, making a total of 400 looms at work in the colony, which produce annually cotton cloths of various qualities sold out of the colony at the value of from 150,000 to 200,000 florins (L.12,500 to L.16,666). The produce of the looms and other workshops and handicrafts consumed in the colony is estimated at L.2500 more—giving as the value of the articles produced about L.15,000 to L.20,000 a year, and it is stated that upon these there is a certain amount of profit which goes to reduce the deficit on the agricultural part.

It is worthy of remark that the persons employed in manufactures and some of the handicrafts whose labour is said to be profitable, are exclusively women and children, or persons who have not strength enough for agricultural labour; and that the persons employed in agriculture are the able-bodied men and women whose labour is so unprofitable that, besides swallowing up the profits of the looms, it entails an annual loss upon the society. The amount of the actual deficit caused by the agricultural operations in the free colonies has not been stated, and is not accurately known beyond the limits of the colonial administration, but there is good reason to believe that it exceeds a million of florins. This would amount, even taking it at one million, to a debt of about 2352 florins upon each of the 425 lots which have been cultivated. But the improvement of the land has raised its value from about 100 florins for the three bunders to a probable average value of 1050 florins. There is also upon each a house erected at a cost of 500 florins. So that, allowing for deterioration of the buildings, the average value of the house and land of each lot may be about 1500 florins, and there may be moveable property worth about 50 florins, leaving for each lot an uncovered balance against the society of about 800 florins, or L.66, 13s. 4d. This is equal to nearly L.2 per annum of loss upon each lot or family since the commencement, and the deficit is not likely to diminish, but rather progressively to increase, if the present system is persevered in. Had the operations of the colonists been confined to agriculture, as was originally intended, the annual deficit would have been still greater, for we have seen that the profit upon manufactures and handicrafts goes to cover a part of the loss upon agriculture. In this calculation neither the original price paid for the land nor the interest upon that sum for thirty-five years, has been taken into account, but if this charge were made, calculating the interest at 4 per cent., the uncovered debt on each lot of $7\frac{1}{10}$ acres would amount to L.86, 13s. 4d., and the annual loss to about L.2, 9s. 7d. But the small farmers beyond the limits of the colony, upon the same heath, pay rent at the rate of from 80 to 100 florins for three bunders, or from L.7 to L.8 per annum, and live. The difference, therefore, between the annual value of the labour of a colonial family engaged both in agriculture and manufactures, and that of the independent peasant family depending on agriculture alone, cannot be less than from L.9 to L.10, and may be considerably more, because, if the peasants are prosperous, as they are supposed to be, they are probably not only living but saving.

But the colonist is not without some inducement to immediate exertion besides the ultimate prospect of independence, which, however, with its implied dependence upon his own exertions, he does not perhaps greatly covet. The colonists receive wages which nominally bear some proportion to the amount of work done. The wages for adults vary from a maximum of 1 florin or 1s. 8d. to a minimum of 80 cents or 1s. 4d. each per week, with an allowance for children from one to fifteen years of age, which may bring the receipts for a family of six up to about 5 florins or 8s. 4d. or even in some cases to 6 florins, (10s.), as the maximum maximum, and 3 florins or 5s. as the minimum per week. These wages are paid partly in bread made of three measures of rye meal and two of potatoes, partly in other articles of food or clothing, and partly in tokens of conventional value, current only in the colony. With this conventional money they can purchase from the colonial canteen, such articles (excepting intoxicating liqours, which are prohibited), as they may require in addition to those supplied by the society in part payment of their wages, to the milk of the cows lent to them, and to the vegetables raised in the small garden attached to each dwelling. They are permitted to sell the milk, or the butter made from it, and their children are encouraged to earn wages according to a fixed tariff of piece work at the manufactories and workshops of the society in the colony. But the society cannot actually regulate the wages of the agriculturists according to the work performed. Though the colonists inhabit the houses originally built upon the different lots, all, except the sixteen free peasants, work for behalf of the society, and work in common. It is necessary, with a view to superintendence and discipline, to collect them into gangs, and, independent of this impediment to an accurate estimate of each person's work, the society which has undertaken to maintain the family is obliged to supply its wants. Practically the minimum rate of wages is never resorted to unless as a punishment for some act of delinquency. The condition of the colonist is therefore little affected by the greater or less amount of the work he performs, and however small it may be he is assured of a comfortable habitation, clothing and fuel, with food enough to keep him and his family in health. It can excite no surprise to find that, in the words of the assistant director, "there is a great desire amongst the able-bodied indigent persons in the "communes to come to the colony. There are always more applications than can be ac-"cepted." To the indolent or unambitious man who shrinks from the struggles and hazards of independence, and is willing to forego its hopes in consideration of an easily earned and secure but comfortable subsistence for himself and his family, the attractions of the colony must be irresistible, and colonial life the realization of his dreams.

Although the able-bodied indigent persons of good character, who have been sent to the free colonies, have failed to produce nearly enough for their own subsistence, their children, who are all educated at the excellent schools of the society, might be expected to acquire better habits and greater intelligence than their parents, and to a certain extent that expectation is fulfilled. In answer to my inquiry as to the condition of those who had left the colony, I received from the assistant director the following answer,—"Many of the "young persons who have left the colony have gone with improved habits, and some have "done well. Few of them have become industrious enough to maintain themselves throughout "the year by their own labour." The cause of this is evident. That best part of the working man's secular education which, in the bosom of his family, and by the example of those around him, teaches self-reliance, was wanting, and that is a defect for which all the literature taught in the school could not compensate. The young colonists accustomed to rely and to see their parents and every one about them rely upon others for their means of subsistence, had learned to read and write, and had acquired a knowledge of arithmetic, of geography, and perhaps also some acquaintance with mathematics; but they had not learned to trust to their own exertions for a livelihood, and therefore few of them were able to maintain themselves.

It is impossible not to respect the motives and admire the energy of General Van-den Bosch and his associates in carrying out so great an undertaking; and if, made wiser by the failure of the experiment which their philanthropy and patriotism induced them to make, we can point to the errors of the system on which the free colonies were established, it would be presumptuous to sneer at those excellent and able men for falling, thirty-five years ago, into errors which some of the ablest and best amongst ourselves are, even now, ready to repeat.

General Van-den Bosch did not confine his patriotic exertions for the regeneration of the indigent classes in Holland, to the establishment of the free colonies. Having provided in these for able-bodied indigent persons of good character who were not paupers, he resolved to establish other colonies for the reception of able-bodied paupers and mendicants, who had become chargeable to communes or the public, and who were not of good character. By the law of Holland, begging is an offence punishable by imprisonment, and it was resolved that able-bodied poor persons found guilty of mendicancy, vagrancy, or similar petty offences, should be permitted, instead of being imprisoned, to commute the sentence for residence during a certain number of years in the forced or pauper colonies. But it was found that many persons resorted to begging for the purpose of being sent to the colonies, and now mendicants are sentenced to a certain term of imprisonment, and thereafter to be taken to the forced colonies—at the same time, paupers, with the concurrence of the communes to which they are chargeable, may and do enter these colonies voluntarily. A property was purchased at Omerschans, in the province of Over-Yssel, consisting now of 1006 bunders, or about 2581 imperial acres of land, of average quality, on which there was an old redoubt and some buildings belonging to the government. Of these the society was allowed the use free of charge. The redoubt, of which the ditch and walls still remained more or less entire, was well suited for a place of confinement; and in it sufficient accommodation for about 2500 paupers of both sexes and all ages, was prepared in 1823, besides apartments for the necessary establishment of guards and officers. At the same time, the society purchased a property in the province of Drenth, which now consists of 1094 bunders, where it has established three other pauper or forced colonies, called Veenhuisen, No. 1, No. 2, and No. 3. Two of these were originally destined for the reception of orphans and foundlings, but only No. 1 is now occupied by that class; the other two are repetitions of Omerschans.

Contracts were concluded with the government for the reception and maintenance of paupers paupers and orphans at a fixed annual rate per head—the government undertaking to disburse the funds and recover the amount from the communes and local boards for the relief of the poor. The rates originally fixed were found to be too low, and in 1843 a new arrangement was concluded, by which the government undertook to pay annually to the society, 322,000 florins. In consideration of that payment, the society engaged to receive 9200 able-bodied paupers, and it was agreed that, in addition to the stipulated sum, an indemnity should be paid to the society for each disabled or partially disabled person who should be sent. If the government did not avail itself of its right to occupy the full number of 9200 places, it was nevertheless, so long as the inmates did not number fewer than 5800, to pay the stipulated sum of 322,000 florins, or L.26,833 : 6 : 8, as well as the indemnity for the number of disabled or partially disabled persons actually placed in the colonies.

On the admission of a pauper, his or her name is entered in the register with the date of birth, religious persuasion, date of admission, place and cause of arrest, description of person, and the name of the commune chargeable. There is also a column for the date of leaving the colony, and another for remarks as to conduct and other circumstances, such as, whether he is admitted for the first time, how his confinement terminates, whether by discharge, desertion, or death. Having been registered, the pauper's hair is cut close; then comes a bath, after which the peculiar dress of the colony is put on, the proper quarters are assigned, and work is commenced.

The sexes occupy separate apartments and airing yards in the quadrangle, but the latter being divided only by two open palings with a road between them, a good deal of intercourse is maintained by looks, signs, and even verbally, at a distance of only six or eight feet between the men and women, who also meet at out-door work; and as might be expected, bad consequences result from this defect in the arrangements. The inmates, both male and female, sleep in large halls in hammocks, such as are used on board of ships, and which, by means of cords and pullies, are drawn up close to the ceiling during the day, allowing sufficient head room to move freely without being incommoded by them, and are let down at night. On each side of the hall is a range of bunker seats, interrupted only by the windows and doors, in which each inmate has a locked compartment for the reception of clothes, bread, or any other property. The number of persons who thus sleep in one apartment is so great, that, towards morning, the atmosphere must be horrible, and must have become highly noxious were it not that these halls are vacant and thoroughly ventilated during the day, except at meal-times—for the inmates eat and sleep in the same apartments.

They rise at a quarter past five o'clock in summer, and an hour later in winter, and are allowed three quarters of an hour for dressing, washing, and breakfast. Thereafter they work till half-past eleven, when they have dinner, and rest till one—then work again till supper, at six—at seven, roll call—at half-past eight to bed.

The punishments consist of imprisonment in the chamber of discipline—solitary confinement in a cell, with or without irons, not exceeding fourteen days—beating with a stick, not exceeding forty blows—and, finally, flogging. While imprisoned, they receive no food but bread and water. The offences for which these punishments are inflicted are, drunkenness, abusive language, immoral words or actions, conspiracy, counterfeiting or defacing the conventional currency of the colony, refusal to obey, theft or wilful injury of property, desertion; and for more serious offences they are carried before the tribunals of the country.

The fort and grounds are surrounded by guards, whose duty it is to prevent the escape of the paupers, and there are bodies of veteran pensioners, forming part of each pauper colony, who are ready to repress any attempt at disturbance. The inmates wear only the dress of the colony, which, for the men, is all brown—hat, coat, and trousers—except a green collar. Deserters wear a robe striped black and white, which is peculiar to them, and easily distinguished even at a distance.

The chief part of the food of the paupers consists of a stated quantity of bread for each person, according to his or her class, made of three-fifths of unsifted rye meal and two-fifths of potatoes, the same as is used in the free colonies; but they are enabled to buy other articles, such as butter, lard, salt, tobacco, etc., in the canteen, from the wages paid them in the conventional coinage of the colonies, which, having no intrinsic value, is not current beyond their limits. The bread above mentioned is cheaper than bread made entirely of rye—the latter costs a halfpenny per pound, or 2d. for 4 lbs.; the former about 2d. for 5 lbs.; but the colonists generally prefer it. No other kind of bread is used except in the hospital. The purchases of the paupers in the canteen amount, on an average, to about four-fifths of a penny each per day; allowing for each, therefore, three pounds of bread, the average daily cost of each inmate's food would be $2\frac{3}{10}$d. or $16\frac{1}{10}$d. per week. The food, however, is occasionally varied—peas, beans, barley, and green vegetables being substituted for a part of the bread. In the choice of these articles the managers are chiefly guided by the price, selecting the most economical; it is probable, therefore, that the cost of the daily food is not much affected by these changes.

The land belonging to the colony of Omerschans consists, as has been stated, of 1006 bunders and 7 ares of $\frac{1}{100}$ part of a bunder—753 bunders 46 ares are in tillage, divided into 21 farms. Each farm is managed by a practical farmer, who engages to deliver a stipulated quantity of wheat, potatoes, hay, etc., per bunder, and 70 kilograms, or rather more than 150 lbs. of butter, for each cow. He pays the price of any deficiency, and receives the price of any excess in his deliveries below or above the stipulated quantity. On each of these farms there is at least one pair of horses; and 25 dray oxen and 304 cows are divided amongst them. The total extent of arable land is 1932 acres, besides 28 acres of gardens attached to the houses of the officials and others—altogether 1960 acres productive. The remainder remainder consists of airing grounds, embankments, roads, canals, ditches, and courtyards of buildings.

On the 31st of December 1851, the population of the colony of Omerschans was 2390, of which 85 were officials and their families; 95 free colonists, sent there as a punishment; 136 farmers and their families;—making together 316 who were not chargeable as inmates, but constituted part of the paid establishment, or were properly chargeable to the free colonies. There remained, therefore, 2062 to supply labour. The return from which these numbers are taken does not give the distribution of employments; but in the last week of 1852 the population of Omerschans was 2414, of whom 336 were officials and domestic servants, 821 were employed in field labour, and 569 in manufactories and handicrafts—leaving 688 who did not work. The number of horses was 48, of draft oxen 25, and of cows, the property of the society, 304. We have thus, besides 28 acres of garden ground, 1932 acres of arable land of average quality, with 21 practical farmers to manage it, and a force of 48 horses, 25 dray oxen, and 821 able-bodied adults to work it,—that is, a pair of horses or two pair of oxen for every 64½ acres, in addition to one able-bodied field labourer for about every 2⅓ acres, besides the assistance of additional hands usually employed in other work, to assist at hay and corn harvests, and at raising potatoes. The result to be obtained is, from that land, with that force, to produce the means of maintaining 2414 persons of all ages, or, rather, deducting the officials and their families, 2078 persons; 304 cows, 4 bulls, and 114 pigs being also provided to assist in effecting that object. The land, including the gardens, gives 1 acre to 1·06 persons, or 100 acres to 106 persons of all ages, and the working force is much more than sufficient. But the land of Omerschans does not produce food enough for the people and the cattle. The deficiency which has to be supplied by purchase amounts to about L.2500 a year, or more than L.1, 4s. per head, leaving all the expenses of buildings, clothing, fuel, light, implements, cost of cattle, establishment of paid officials, and interest of capital to be provided from other sources. The system at the two other adult pauper colonies, at Veenhuisen, is the same; and the results of the agricultural operations are not more favourable.

For the purpose of employing the paupers who are not fitted for field labour, the society has established in those colonies extensive manufactories and workshops for various handicrafts; and they have undertaken extensive contracts with the government for the supply of cotton cloths for clothing the troops in the Dutch East Indian possessions, and coffee bags for Batavia. Of these, and other productions of the looms, they sell out of the colonies to the value of from 250,000 to 300,000 florins, the produce of pauper labour—or from L.20,000 to L.25,000 yearly—besides supplying for the use of the colonies productions of manufactures and handicrafts of the yearly value of about 200,000 florins, or L.16,666—giving together from L.35,000 to L.40,000 as the value of the manufactured articles.

It might be supposed, as the agricultural operations provide a great part of the food, and as manufacturing industry is conducted on a scale so extensive, that the paupers, if not able to maintain themselves, must at least contribute largely to their own support, and greatly lighten the burden to the country; and, without careful inquiry, it is difficult to resist a conviction that such must be the result. But, upon a closer examination, the economy of the system appears to be questionable.

The sum paid by the government to the society for the maintenance of persons placed in the pauper colonies is 322,000 florins per annum, with an additional sum, amounting, on an average of years, to not less than 110,000 florins, as indemnity for disabled and partially disabled persons, including in that category all children under fifteen years of age. The sum paid to the society for the maintenance of the whole number of inmates of the pauper colonies is therefore 432,000 florins annually, which, divided by the number of persons maintained, will give the average rate per head for both sexes and all ages. The average number of persons maintained in all the colonies, for the ten years ending 31st December 1852, was 10,247. The average number in the free colonies during the same time was 2543, leaving for the average number in the pauper colonies 7704—which gives 56 florins 7½ cents, or L.4 : 13 : 5½, as the average annual cost to the state of each poor person, of whatever age or sex; but, to ascertain the actual cost, it would be necessary to add the interest of the capital invested by the society in the land, buildings, etc., of those establishments. The amount of capital so employed is not easily ascertained, but it is stated that for colonial buildings alone a sum of 5,598,500 florins was expended. If we suppose that 1,000,000 of that sum was expended in the free colonies, there would remain for buildings in the pauper colonies 4,598,500 florins, which, at four per cent., would yield of annual interest 183,940 florins, and that sum divided by 7704, the average number of inmates, gives 23 florins 87 cents, and with the 56 florins 7½ cents formerly stated, brings up the annual cost of each inmate to 79 florins 94 cents, or L.6 : 13 : 4—and there still remains the interest on the capital invested in the land—cattle, implements, furniture, machinery, etc., to be added.

But it may be imagined that the society is making a profit on its transactions, and that the maintenance of the colonists does not cost so much as is paid by the state. The answer to any such surmise is very simple. The society has incurred a debt of 4,550,951 florins in addition to all the sums it has received, and the value of the whole property of every description, real and moveable, belonging to it, is not estimated by the society itself at more than 3,015,528 florins 97 cents. If the society were to wind up its affairs now, therefore, it would be insolvent, and the defalcation would amount to 1,535,423 florins, or L.127,952.

Such being the pecuniary results of the great experiment conducted by the Benevolent Society in Holland, so far as they can now be ascertained, the question arises whether its moral results are such as to compensate for the financial failure of the original scheme. The plan may not be economical, but it may be beneficial; and may accomplish the proposed regeneration of the paupers, though at a greater expense than was contemplated. The object proposed was to train the paupers to habits of industry and economy by subjecting them, during some years, to a rigid discipline; by holding out inducements to exertion in a maximum and minimum rate of wages, supposed to bear a general relation to the amount of work executed; by enabling the pauper to obtain his discharge as soon as he had saved a certain fixed sum, provided his conduct had otherwise been good; and, finally, by setting aside a certain amount of his wages as a compulsory saving, to be paid upon his discharge, for his subsistence until he could find employment. There can be no doubt that these means all tend towards the accomplishment of the result desired; but they are founded, so far at least as the inducements to exertion are concerned, chiefly upon the principle of demanding a present sacrifice for the sake of a distant benefit, which is precisely the kind of virtue that the improvident classes are least capable of exercising. It is impossible, especially with reference to agricultural labour, to subject each individual to the requisite supervision if they all work separately, or to determine the amount performed by each if many work together; it is, thus, impracticable to measure the wages by the work executed; and, above all, each is assured of a maintenance whether he works diligently or not. It was, therefore, nearly certain that the amount of labour would be the smallest tolerated; and the tendency in these cases is always to a progressive reduction of that amount; for even the overseers themselves come by degrees to be satisfied with an amount of work that at first appeared to them to be altogether insufficient. The result is that it is estimated, on what appears to be sufficient evidence, that it requires about fifteen colonists to perform the field work of one good day-labourer; that is, if the number of paupers in a colony be 1500, the agricultural labour performed by them will not exceed what would be performed by 100 good day-labourers, whose wages in Holland, 1s. 3d. per day, or 7s. 6d. per week for each, would not maintain even three paupers at the rate which they cost the society. It may be doubted, therefore, whether working, as the paupers work, in the field, has much effect in promoting habits of industry.

In some of the manufactories, where work is paid for by the piece, it is comparatively easy to apportion the remuneration with reference to the work performed; but still the minimum must in any case be paid—food, lodging, clothing, and all the necessaries of life must be provided, however little may be the work executed: and to that improvident class the distant prospect of having a larger saving to carry away at their discharge, or even the prospect of diminishing the term of confinement by a few months, is not generally a sufficient stimulus to induce them to exert themselves. This is clearly established by the sum they annually cost the country on the one hand, and the debts of the society on the other. I endeavoured to ascertain what proportion of the inmates had, by saving the requisite sum, anticipated the time fixed for their liberation; but to that question I was not fortunate enough to obtain an answer. I have reason, however, to believe that such cases are rare.

The effect of the training in the colony can be ascertained only after the discharge of the colonists, and the number of persons who, having undergone that training for the average term of three years, are sent back to the colony, will give some idea of the proportion which relapse into mendicancy. Of the 4487 paupers who were in Omerschans and Veenhuisen in 1851, only 1923 were there for the first time, and 2564 were persons who had relapsed after undergoing the training of the colonies. Of 4592, in the year 1852, there were 1932 for the first time, and 2660 who had relapsed. On the 31st December 1851 the number of pauper colonists was 4520, of these 1923 were in the pauper colonies for the first time, 1163 for the second time, 721 for the third time, 458 for the fourth, 190 for the fifth, 42 for the sixth, 14 for the seventh, none for the eighth, 3 for the ninth, and 1 for the tenth time. In short, it is plain that there, as elsewhere, there is a certain population that fluctuates between vagrancy or mendicity and the colony or the workhouse, and that the training in the colonies is not more effectual than the measures resorted to in other countries for reclaiming a class which, from peculiarities of constitution and of circumstances, appear to be born only to live upon the labour of others. The problem by what means that class can be made to contribute most to their own support has not been solved in those colonies.

Each colonist in the pauper colonies of Holland, costs the country, on an average, as has been stated, more than L.6; 13 : 4 per annum, in addition to the produce of his own labour. The average cost of paupers on the roll, or registered, in Scotland, during the seven years for which there are official returns, is about L.4, and even in England does not amount to nearly so much as in the Dutch colonies. Yet in those colonies the proportion of able-bodied persons capable of labour far exceeds that in any part of England, while in Scotland there are no able-bodied poor. On the other hand, the scale of living among the labouring classes in Holland is considerably lower than in Scotland; the wages of a good agricultural labourer in the Netherlands, during the summer months, do not exceed 1s. 3d. per day, or 7s. 6d. per week; the same man would receive in most parts of Scotland 10s. per week. The proportion is therefore as 3 to 4, and would raise the proportional cost of paupers maintained on the Dutch colonial system in this country to L.8 : 17 : 8. Neither the lodging nor the food provided in those pauper colonies is such as would be tolerated in this country; and the means of coercion—the punishments—are such as could not be lawfully resorted to here; and if legalised, would be practically inoperative, because they would revolt the feelings of the community.

In conclusion, it may be proper to remark that the circumstances of the Kingdom of the Netherlands afford in many respects fair grounds of comparison with Scotland. The population of Holland is stated at 3,362,625, and the expenditure on the relief of the poor amounts annually to something more than L.500,000. Both are essentially Protestant countries tries in which the different religious communities take an active part in the management of their own poor,—in both, provision more or less adequate has been made for the education of the working-classes. In both countries the people are generally frugal and provident: the influence of domestic life—the feeling of family—is very similar in the two countries. Both are distinguished by a spirit of patient perseverance to which, perhaps, may, in some measure be attributed their success in agriculture. There is probably no other foreign country in which the results of an experiment on any matter of social economy could be more instructive to us in Scotland.

The results that may be deduced from the experience of the free and pauper colonies in Holland appear to be,—

1*st*, Indigent families can rarely be made self-sustaining by providing them with houses, land, and all that is necessary for its cultivation and for their own maintenance until they are able to support themselves.

2*d*, Children brought up in the families of persons who are maintained by charity, though well educated in excellent schools, rarely become self-sustaining, if there are means of subsistence provided by public or private charity, on which they can fall back.

3*d*, Of all the branches of secular education for the working-classes, the most important, both to the community and to the individual, is that which teaches self-reliance.

4*th*, Paupers, even when able-bodied, cannot be made to contribute to their own support by employing them in agricultural labour on land belonging to the body which undertakes to maintain them; but, on the contrary, the attempt so to diminish the cost of maintaining them tends to augment it.

5*th*, Paupers can be more advantageously employed in manufactures and handicrafts, than in agricultural labour, but it is doubtful whether the price obtained in the market for the produce of their industry, after deducting expenses, will diminish the charge for their maintenance.

6*th*, The combination of agricultural labour with manufactures and handicrafts, leads to similar results.

7*th*, The moral effects of the system pursued in the pauper colonies of Holland do not appear to be more satisfactory than those obtained from the systems adopted in other countries.

A. Aberdeen (Aberdeen Dist.)

Col. V. In a few of these cases a report was made to the Sheriff-Clerk that, upon the order being sent, relief had been granted.

Cols. XI. and XII. No record of these proceedings kept.

Col. XIII. One in which decree of absolvitor passed, one decree against defender, and two remain undisposed of.

B. Argyle (Tobermory Dist.)

Col. I. Numerous applications were made, not included here, the Sheriff-substitute having effected extrajudicial arrangements by meeting with the applicants and Inspectors.

Col. III. In these cases the Inspectors wrote letters to the clerk of court, which were not admitted as proper answers, and on the order for answers being repeated the applicants were admitted on the roll, or relieved to their satisfaction.

Col. V. No steps taken since 3d February.

Col. VI. There are two applications at the instance of this applicant.

C. Argyle (Fort-William Dist.)

Col. XIII. Decree against son of Pauper.

D. Ayr (Ayr Dist.)

Col. II. In all of these cases but one, the order for interim relief was either the first order in the case or was made contemporaneously with an appointment for the Inspector to lodge reasons of refusal. In the single case referred to it was postponed till a later stage of the process and after being made, no further proceedings appear to have taken place. In one case, not included in the above enumeration, the Inspector, whilst ordered to lodge reasons, was recommended to provide a nurse for the applicant, and this case appears to have proceeded no further.

Col. III. In two of these cases the Inspector's statement was one admitting the applicants to the poor-roll. In another, it was an order for the applicant's admission to the Poorhouse. And in a fourth case, after the applicant had been appointed to answer the Inspector's statement, he produced a letter agreeing to readmit the applicant on the poor-roll. Thus, in four cases, out of the above six voluntarily recognising the applicants as proper objects of parochial relief. In one of the two excepted cases permanent relief was ultimately refused, (within a month of the date of the order for interim relief), and in the other of these cases no answers were lodged by the applicant to the Inspector's statement.

Col. IV. Upon a closed record, and after a concluded proof. In three cases not enumerated above, the applicants were acknowledged by the Inspector to be proper objects of parochial relief. This was done while the record was being prepared, and without there being an order for interim relief.

Col. V. Of which refused on the merits, four cases; not proceeded in twenty-three cases. In none of the first four cases but one was interim relief ordered. In enumerating the latter class of cases, those have been excluded where interim relief was ordered, as well as the case before referred to, where the Inspector was recommended to provide a nurse for the applicant.

Col. VI. The last order in which is for the applicant to answer the Inspector's statement, and is dated 28th June 1853.

Col. XI. All under Sect. 80.

Col. XII. These were on the party's own confession. In the third case, the party having enacted himself to undertake the future maintenance of his illegitimate child, the Inspector did not move for sentence.

E. Ayr (Kilmarnock Dist.)

Col. XIII. Two sustained and one assoilzied.

F. Banff.

Col. I. As no order for interim relief was granted in any case, no note of these applications was kept.

Col. XIII. 3 decreets; 1 dismissed; 1 still depending.

Col. XIV. Remitted to ordinary roll, and not since moved in.

G. Bute.

Col. XIII. Decree obtained.

App. (B.) No. 1.

Abstract of Applications to Sheriffs.

A. Edinburgh.

Col. I. There are on an average two or three applications made every day at the Sheriff-Clerk's office, many of them totally incompetent. No list is made of these.

Col. XIII. Not yet disposed of.

Col. XIV. It is not easy to answer this query correctly, as the actions referred to are often brought in the name of the Inspector, apparently as a private party, and not in name of the parish for which he is Inspector.

B. Elgin.

Col. XIII. The Sheriff suggested that the Inspector, or husband of respondent should try and get at his property in respondent's possession for his support and Inspector's reimbursement.

C. Fife (Cupar Dist.)

Col. I. It may be stated that several applications have been made to the Sheriff by paupers for orders for relief from different parishes, and on communicating with the Inspector those have been arranged without any discussion.

Col. XIII. 3 decrees; 1 absolvitor.

D. Fife (Dunfermline Dist.)

Col. IX. In two of these appeals the alteration was on the point of expenses; in the other, upon the merits. The question was whether certain terms upon which Poorhouse relief was offered, was tantamount to a refusal of relief. The Sheriff-Substitute decided that it was; the Sheriff that it was not.

E. Forfar (Forfar Dist.)

Col. XIII. Decrees in absence of defenders.

F. Forfar (Dundee Dist.)

Col. XIII. Decree in absence.

G. Haddington.

Col. XIII. Decree in two cases, two settled previous to being heard by Sheriff, and one compromised after being called in court.

H. Inverness (Inverness Dist.)

Col. XIII. Party found liable.

I. Inverness (Skye Dist.)

Col. I. Exclusive of applications disposed of by verbal explanation.

K. Lanark (Glasgow Dist.)

Col. I. The number cannot be stated precisely, as no note of the applications is kept, but they seldom are less than two or three every day; and in stating them therefore at about 750, the number it is believed is about correct.

Col. II. The reason of the discrepancy between the number of applications and the number of orders on Inspector is, that the Sheriff-Substitute is in the habit of sending a memorandum by the pauper to the Inspector in the first instance, expressive of his opinion of the case derived from the pauper's statement, and the matter is then commonly adjusted to the pauper's satisfaction. Litigation and delay are thus often avoided.

L. Lanark (Hamilton Dist.)

Col. XIII. 2 decrees; 2 dismissed; 1 withdrawn.

A. Lanark (Airdrie Dist.)

Col. XIII. In small debt court 2 decrees; 1 assoilzied; 1 dismissed; and afterwards settled extrajudicially.

B. Linlithgow.

Col. VI. The four cases undisposed of have been allowed to drop, the Inspector having given the relief sought without further proceedings.

Col. XII. The other case found not proven.

C. Nairn.

Col. I. Various other applications orally disposed of.
Col. VI. Not at avizandum.
Col. XI. In which the diet was deserted pro loco et tempore on the motion of the prosecutor.

D. Orkney and Shetland (Kirkwall Dist.)

Col. V. It is believed that in one of the cases in which the applicant has neglected to proceed, relief is afforded by the Inspector.

E. Orkney and Shetland (Lerwick Dist.)

Col. V. In which no movement made by either party.

F. Perth (Perth Dist.)

Col. I. The number given up are written applications; more than twice that number might be stated for verbal applications, either refused or got satisfied by a personal interview with Inspector.
Col. II. Number of cases refused at once without answers, 6.
Col. XII. All settled on party being apprehended, examined, and committed for further examination.

G. Perth (Dunblane Dist.)

Col. XIII. Decree against defender.

H. Renfrew (Greenock Dist.)

Col. XIII. Still in dependence.

I. Sutherland.

Col III. In one of the above cases an order was rendered unnecessary by the Inspector's placing the applicant on the roll, on service of the petition.

RETURN to an Order of the Honourable The House of Commons, dated 6 July 1854;—for,

COPIES "of REPORTS from the Commissioner in Charge of the Land Revenues of the Crown, on the subject of Arrangements to be entered into with Persons desirous of trying for and raising GOLD in England and Wales."

Treasury Chambers, 10 July 1854.

JAMES WILSON, Secretary.

COPIES of REPORTS from the Commissioner in Charge of the Land Revenues of the Crown, on the subject of Arrangements to be entered into with Persons desirous of trying for and raising GOLD in England and Wales.

My Lords, Office of Woods, &c., 3 February 1854.

I HAVE to acknowledge the receipt of your Lordships' reference, of the 23d ultimo, of a letter from Mr. Moffatt, M.P., enclosing another letter from Mr. Murchison, dated the 20th ultimo, inquiring whether the Crown asserts any right or royalty in regard to either gold or silver, when found in combination with ore containing other minerals, beyond those contained and reserved in the 1st William & Mary, c. 30, and 5th William & Mary, c. 6.

Your Lordships are probably aware that the prerogative rights of the Crown extend to all mines of gold and silver, and that these are usually termed Royal Mines.

The exercise of the Crown's prerogative is, however, restrained by the Acts abovementioned, as amended by the Act 55 Geo. 3, c. 134, by which several enactments it was declared that all mines of copper, tin, iron, or lead, then or thereafter to be discovered, and being in the possession of a subject, should remain in such possession, notwithstanding that the said mines should be claimed to be Royal mines. But it was expressly provided that the Crown should be entitled to the pre-emption of the ore of all such mines (other than tin ore in the counties of Devon and Cornwall), upon paying to the proprietors of the mine or mines wherein such ore might be found, within 30 days after the ore should be raised and laid upon the bank, the undermentioned rates, viz.

For all ore washed and made clean and merchantable, wherein there is copper, per ton - - - -	16	–	–
Ditto - - - tin - ditto - - - - -	2	–	–
Ditto - - - iron - ditto - - - - -	2	–	–
Ditto - - - lead - ditto - - - - -	25	–	–

By these enactments the Crown's prerogative rights are only affected in cases where gold and silver are found in combination with copper, tin, lead, or iron; and the precious metals may be worked, in these cases, without a licence from the Crown. But if gold and silver are found in a virgin state, secreted in rocks, or in combination with any other metals or minerals than those specified in the Acts referred to, then the prerogative rights of the Crown remain in full force, and the precious metals can only be legally worked under a licence to be granted under the authority of a warrant from your Lordships' Board, in conformity with the provisions of the Land Revenue Acts.

The grant of a licence of this description to Mr. Mansell, to search for gold within the property of Lord Poltimore, in the parish of South Molton, county Devon, has recently been sanctioned by your Lordships' warrant of the 7th of April last, and other applications of a similar character are now the subject of negotiation, and will be reported to your Lordships as soon as the necessary arrangements in each case shall be concluded.

As it appeared to me that it might be beneficial, both to the Crown and the adventurers, that in lieu of the right and pre-emption to which the Crown is entitled under the Acts to which I have referred, the Crown should receive a certain royalty or proportional part of the value of the gold and silver when found in combination with other metals, I have recently requested Mr. Sopwith to furnish me with his opinion as to the terms on which such an arrangement should be made; and as I hope shortly to be in possession of his report, I would suggest that your Lordships should refer the applicants to this department, as to the terms on which a licence to work the precious metals can be granted to them.

Mr. Moffatt's letter of the 21st ultimo, with its enclosure, are returned herewith.

I am, &c.

To the Right Honourable the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury. (signed) Charles Gore.

My Lords, Office of Woods, &c., 19 April 1854.

In my report of the 3d ultimo, I acquainted your Lordships that I had recently consulted Mr. Sopwith as to the terms on which it would be reasonable to enter into arrangements with persons desirous of trying for and raising gold in England and Wales, and I now enclose for your Lordships information a copy of my instructions to Mr. Sopwith, and of his reply, dated the 24th ultimo.

It was stated to your Lordships in the same report, that the Crown's prerogative right extends to all mines of gold and silver, but that the exercise of that right is restrained by the Acts 1st of William & Mary, c. 30, and the 5th William & Mary, c. 6; under the provisions of which, the Crown is not entitled to the property in the ores of copper, lead, iron, or tin belonging to individuals, in which the precious metals are found, but only to the pre-emption of those ores at certain specified rates. In other cases, where gold and silver are found in a virgin state, imbedded in quartz or quartose rocks, or in combination with mineral substances, other than those specified above, the precious metals can only be legally worked under a licence from this department, to be granted on terms to be approved by your Lordships.

There are, however, difficulties in dealing with such cases, because it has been held by the law officers that the Crown has no right of entry upon lands belonging to, and in which the minerals are vested in individuals, for the purpose of searching for the precious metals; and therefore the power conferred by a licence from the Crown can only be exercised with the assent of the owner of the soil.

Such being the legal bearings of the question, I have now to inform your Lordships, that the applications which have been made to me upon the subject, appear to divide themselves into three classes:

1st. Where the gold is found in combination with other metals or minerals, the whole of which, with the necessary easements for working, are vested in the Crown.

2d. Where the gold is found in combination with the ores specified in the Acts of William & Mary, and which are not vested in the Crown; and,

3d. Where the gold is found in a virgin state, secreted in rocks, and not in combination with the ores and minerals specified in those Acts, on land where the minerals are not vested in the Crown.

In the first of these cases, the Crown has the power, with or without the consent of the owner of the surface, to grant licences to enter upon and work the gold and all other minerals, and it will be observed from Mr. Sopwith's report, that he is of opinion that where these other minerals are already under lease at a proportional royalty, licences should be granted to enable the lessees to raise gold at the same royalty as is payable under the existing lease; and that, where these minerals are not under lease, the proper and usual royalty for the baser metal should be the guide, in the first instance, as to the royalty to be required upon the gold. He is of opinion, however, that although such usual royalties may be required in the first instance, yet that it may hereafter be advisable to reduce the

the amount payable on the gold to a proportion of one-twentieth part in value; such reduction being recommended, on the ground that mining adventurers may thereby be induced to make larger excavations, and to obtain other ores of copper, lead, &c., on which the usual and accustomed royalty would be payable, but which would be wholly unproductive to the Crown, unless adventurers were tempted to work them by the prospect of obtaining the gold with which they are combined, at a very moderate royalty.

In the second class of cases, your Lordships will observe that Mr. Sopwith fully concurs with me in opinion as to the expediency of commuting the Crown's right of pre-emption for a proportional royalty, and suggests that such royalty should not be more than one-twentieth part in value of the gold so produced.

In the third class of cases, Mr. Sopwith is of opinion that, as the Crown has not the right to enter upon the lands of individuals for the purpose of searching for gold, and that the grantees must make terms with the owners of the land, it would not be expedient to fix a higher duty than one-twelfth, while in many cases a lower amount, as far as one-twentieth, may be more suitable to the general conditions.

In these, as well as in the preceding cases, Mr. Sopwith recommends, with a view to check mere speculation, that a moderate fixed annual payment should be required from the lessees of from 10 l. to 20 l. per annum.

Such are the general recommendations and suggestions of Mr. Sopwith's Report, and I will now proceed to acquaint your Lordships with the steps which have been taken in regard to the applications already made to this office upon the subject.

The principal discoveries of gold in Wales have taken place in the parishes of Llaneltyd, Llanaber, and Llanfachreth, near Dolgelley, county of Merioneth, and in these parishes the Crown is entitled to the minerals under several thousand acres of land, formerly parcel of the wastes of the Lordship of Penllyn, but now inclosed under various Acts of Parliament, in which there are clauses whereby the Crown's right to the minerals under such lands, with the necessary easements for working, are strictly reserved.

Of this district but a small portion has hitherto been tried for mineral purposes; and the results obtained have been comparatively trifling. Successive lessees and their assignees have sunk considerable sums of money in opening and testing the ground for lead and copper, without raising sufficient ore to pay the expenses; and the Crown has rarely received more under such leases than the minimum royalty which in all recent lettings it has been customary to reserve in order as far as possible to ensure the exploration of the ground.

Some years since gold was discovered on a portion of these lands, the minerals under which were then, and still are held under lease from the Crown, and the lessee and those holding under him are represented to have spent several thousand pounds in an attempt to raise the precious metal, but the cost of separating the gold from the mineral substances in which it was discovered, added to the irregular and limited distribution of the gold-bearing veins, interposed such obstacles to the profitable working of the mine that the undertaking fell to the ground. Within the last few months, however, auriferous strata of a more valuable description have been discovered in some adjoining sets, also held under lease from the Crown, and the results obtained from the reduction of specimens of the ores of which such strata are composed, together with the improvements recently effected in the machinery employed to crush and separate the quartz, or other mineral substances in which, or in combination with which the gold is discovered, have led to numerous applications being made to me for leases or licences to raise gold in lands through which the gold-bearing flodes have been traced.

Of these applications several have been made by persons who already hold leases from the Crown of the baser minerals within the lands in which they are now desirous of working gold, and with these persons I have arranged terms, founded on Mr. Sopwith's recommendations, and subject to your Lordships' approval, for the grant of licences to be coextensive with, and to expire at the same time as their present leases; and to be held at the same proportional royalty on the gold as is now reserved under those leases upon other minerals, with the addition in each case of such a further and additional reserved or minimum royalty as has been considered reasonable, as shown in the following statement:

In addition to the foregoing, several applications have been made for leases of land in the same locality, on which no trials of minerals have hitherto been made, but having regard to the fact that, as far as I am aware, the results hitherto obtained from the use of the gold-crushing machines have been merely experimental, and that no operations have yet been carried on upon such an extended scale as to admit of a just opinion being formed, as to the actual cost of or profit to be derived from gold-mining in this district, I have not felt justified, in the absence of any reliable information upon the subject, in recommending in such cases the grant of leases for a period of years.

But, in order that the lands in which the Crown is entitled to the minerals as well as the value of those minerals, more particularly of the gold-bearing strata, may be fully tested, I have availed myself of the authority conveyed by your Lordships' warrant of the 24th December 1852, and have granted licences to all applicants of respectability and means to search for minerals in different parcels of land in this district for a period of 12 months only, at a small fixed rent, and at a royalty of 1-12th part in value of the minerals raised.

At the expiration of the terms so granted, the Crown mine agents will be able, with the information of which they will then be in possession as to the results of the searches, and of the reduction and extraction of the gold-bearing veins, to fix the royalty to be required for a lease for years with a greater prospect of the terms being permanently beneficial to the Crown, than if such leases were now to be granted upon the imperfect information yet obtained.

In the second class of cases, in which gold has been discovered in the ores, specified in the Acts of William and Mary, which ores are vested in individuals, I have been in communication with several persons who are represented to have been engaged in searching for gold, in the expectation of obtaining their assent to a commutation of the Crown's right of pre-emption, by the payment of a small proportional royalty upon all the gold raised. But no arrangements have yet been completed with these persons, who are probably holding back until the result of fuller experimental workings are known.

In the event of your Lordships approving of my proceedings herein, I have to request the issue of your warrant authorising me to grant to the persons named in the annexed Schedule, or to whom they may in each case nominate, and to his, her, or their executors, administrators, and assigns, licences to search for and raise all gold and gold ores within the several parcels of land hereinafter described, at the rents, royalties, and for the terms more particularly mentioned in the said Schedule.

Such of the customary clauses inserted in Crown leases as may be considered by the Crown mine agent to be specially applicable to the case will be inserted in these licences, together with clauses requiring the lessees, at the time of rendering their annual accounts, to furnish a proper report of the workings within the year, together with a plan and section showing the excavations which have been carried on, and also with a proviso that within seven days after any sale of gold, gold ores, or ores of other metals or minerals in which gold shall be deposited, shall have taken place, a statutory declaration containing every particular as to quantity, quality, price, name of seller and buyer, and place of delivery, shall be made by one of the licenses and their principal agent, and shall be sent to the Office of Woods, &c.

I am, &c.

Sir, Office of Woods, &c., 27 December 1853.

APPLICATIONS have recently been made to me by various individuals for licences to search for and raise gold in several districts in England and Wales.

It has also been represented that the improvements recently effected in the machinery employed to crush and separate the quartz and other substances or ores in which, or in combination with which, gold is deposited, have removed what has hitherto proved to be the chief obstacle to the remunerative working of gold gold mines in this country, viz. the cost of extracting the precious metal; and as there appears to be a possibility that the raising of gold may become of some importance to the Crown, I should be glad to be favoured with your opinion as to the terms and conditions to be imposed upon persons searching for and raising gold under licence from this department.

You are probably aware that the prerogative rights of the Crown extend to all mines of gold and silver, and that these are usually termed "Royal Mines."

The exercise of the Crown's prerogative is, however, restrained by the Acts 5 Will. & Mary, c. 6, and 55 Geo. 3, c. 134, by which enactments it was declared that all mines of copper, tin, iron, or lead, then or thereafter to be discovered, and being in the possession of a subject, should remain in such possession, notwithstanding that the said mines should be claimed to be Royal mines. But it was expressly provided that the Crown should be entitled to the pre-emption of the ore of all such mines (other than tin ore in the counties of Devon and Cornwall), upon paying to the proprietors of the mine or mines wherein such ore might be found, within 30 days after the ore should be raised and laid upon the bank, the undermentioned rates; viz.

For all ore washed and made clean and merchantable, wherein there is copper, per ton - - - -	16	–	–
Ditto - - - tin, per ton - - - - -	2	–	–
Ditto - - - iron, per ton - - - - -	2	–	–
Ditto - - - lead, per ton - - - - -	25	–	–

It must be observed that in these statutes no provision has been made, giving the Crown or its officers any right to search upon the lands of private individuals for any Royal mine in which the gold is found in a virgin state, or any mine in which gold or silver is found in combination with the baser metals; and I may add, that it has been held that the Crown has no power of entry upon such lands for that purpose.

Having in these observations made you acquainted with the legal bearings of the question, I have now to inform you that the applications before me may be divided into three classes:

1st. Where the gold is found in combination with other metals, the whole of which, with the necessary easements for working, are vested in the Crown.

2d. Where the gold is found in combination with the minerals specified in the Acts of William & Mary, and which are not vested in the Crown.

3d. Where the gold is found in a virgin state or secreted in rocks, and not in combination with the ores and minerals specified in those Acts, on land where the minerals are not vested in the Crown.

In the first of these cases the Crown has the power, with or without the consent of the owner of the surface, to grant licences to enter upon and work the gold and all other minerals; and I am desirous of knowing what royalty you consider it would be reasonable to require upon the gold which may be raised and extracted.

The Crown's North Dolfrwnog Mine at Dolgelley, county of Merioneth, is comprised within this class of cases, and the royalty payable under the present lease of that property is one-twelfth part in value of the copper or other ore raised. Other Crown mines in which gold has been found in the same vicinity are leased at royalties of one-tenth; but the precious metals are not specified in the subjects demised by any of these leases, and in the first-mentioned case the lessee has applied to know the royalty to which gold will be subject; and I propose to recommend the Treasury to authorise the grant of a licence to him to search for and raise gold at such royalty as I may be advised to require.

In considering this subject, you will bear in mind, that the before-mentioned Acts of William & Mary do not apply to cases like this, where the whole of the minerals are vested in the Sovereign, and where the Crown has the power of demanding a royalty on all gold raised, whether found in combination with other metals or not. The case will have to be dealt with, therefore, in the same manner as an ordinary licence to search for minerals.

With regard to the second class, it must be observed, that the right which the Crown possesses is strictly limited to that of pre-emption at the prices fixed by the Acts of William & Mary and Geo. 3, and that the Crown has no power to demand the payment of a royalty on the gold raised in combination with other ores. But a disposition has been shown on the part of the adventurers to commute the right of pre-emption, by paying a royalty on all the gold raised when separated from the other minerals; and it is evident that the adoption of this course will prove more convenient for the officers of the Crown, and far less expensive, than an attempt to enforce the right of pre-emption, which would necessarily involve the examination, by a competent officer, of every ton of ore raised from a mine.

It is also apparent that by accepting a royalty, the Crown will derive a revenue from every ounce of gold raised and extracted; whereas, if the right of pre-emption only is adhered to, the auriferous ores raised may never contain a sufficient deposit of gold to render it profitable for the Crown to exercise that right at the prices fixed by the above-mentioned enactments, although the quantity of gold extracted may be sufficient to realize a profit to the adventurers, who would thus derive the entire benefit of the workings, without contributing any portion to the Crown.

For these reasons, it appears to me that the acceptance of a reasonable royalty would prove to be the most profitable course for the Crown to adopt, and I should be glad to receive your opinion as to the amount of such royalty.

The third class of cases will, I apprehend, come strictly under the title of Royal mines, from which persons have no power to raise gold without special licence from the Crown; and in these cases it will, I presume, be advisable to require the parties to take a licence on payment of a small annual rent and a royalty upon the gold raised.

With regard to the clauses to be inserted in any such licences, I enclose for your perusal the copy of a licence granted by the Commissioners of Woods to search for gold on the South Moulton estates, in the county of Devon (belonging to the third class of cases hereinbefore referred to), and I have to request that if you should consider it necessary that any special conditions should be inserted in such licences that you will favour me with your views on the subject.

I am, &c.

Thomas Sopwith, Esq. (signed) Charles Gore.

Sir, Newcastle-on-Tyne, 24 February 1854.

I BEG respectfully to state, that the several circumstances brought under my notice in the letter which I had the honour to receive from you under date of the 27 December 1853, have had my most careful consideration, and I have now to offer the following observations thereon.

The subject of gold-finding in England is one which is in many points of view curious and important. It is curious from its connexion with the earliest history of these islands, and from the various arrangements which were made in several reigns, and it derives importance from the extraordinary produce of gold in districts where its existence has only been recently known, and from the extensive character of gold-finding explorations, as involving interference with surface rights.

I do not think it necessary here to do more than briefly advert to the historical and mining details which bear upon the subject, inasmuch as they have been prominently brought before the public, and any discussion upon them as regards their practical bearings would be more useful when applied to definite cases than to general principles. In fact, they relate more to legal than to mining questions; and even in a mining point of view it would be difficult, in the compass of a report of this description, to give a clear epitome of the opposite opinions maintained by different parties, nor do I think that any practical benefit could arise from my entering on such matters of detail.

I therefore

I therefore proceed to notice the several points to which the aforenamed letter more particularly refers, confining my observations as much as possible to the explanation of such measures as seem applicable to the several circumstances, with a view to combine all fair encouragements of mining adventure with a due regard to the privileges of the Crown and the rights of the owners of the soil in districts likely to be explored.

Applications (as it is stated in your letter) have recently been made by various individuals for licences to search for and raise gold in several districts in England and Wales, and my attention is directed to the consideration of the terms and conditions to be imposed upon persons searching for and raising gold under licence from the department of the Office of Woods.

The greatly increased facilities for extracting gold from quartz and other substances, by means of improved machinery, are alluded to as presenting "a possibility that the raising of gold may become of some importance to the Crown." In the expressions thus used to denote the general aspect of the subject I entirely concur. Of the possible value of such explorations no reasonable doubt can exist. The probable results will, I apprehend, fall very far short of the sanguine expectations of some, and may very probably far exceed what has commonly been supposed to be the actual condition of gold-producing rocks in this country in recent times. I do not think that any differences of opinion as to the greater or less abundance of gold, or the greater or less cost of its production, could at this time be so determined or reconciled as to furnish any safe guide for business arrangements, founded on such conditions exclusively, and it will be more prudent therefore to view the subject independently of contested opinions. It is of the very nature of mineral mining to be attended with risk and uncertainty; with abundance of ores easily worked and reduced in some cases, and in others a scarcity of, a total absence of ores, for which explorations have been made at a great cost. In ordinary mines the varieties of produce extend from extreme riches to extreme poverty, and if the possibilities of gold mining in England are viewed in the same light, it relieves the subject of all dependence on the accuracy of details, which may be subject to difference of opinion, and points at once to the propriety of adopting the principle of a proportional royalty, and not definite sums of money.

I am not aware of the particular form in which the applications alluded to have been made, but I beg to suggest that a printed form should be given to all applicants to fill up answers to the following questions, viz.: the precise situation, character, and extent of the place applied for; the tenure of the surface and name of owner; the description of works proposed to be undertaken, and the grounds upon which such exploration is deemed likely to be advantageous. As an example of the further details which may be included in such a printed form, I may refer to those which were drawn up by the Dean Forest Mining Commissioners in 1838.

I assume that, as stated in your letter, and as I have generally understood, the prerogative rights of the Crown extend to all mines of gold and silver, and that these are usually called Royal mines, subject, however, to the restraints imposed by the Acts 5 William & Mary, c. 6, and 55 Geo. 3, c. 134, by which, as regards gold and silver contained in copper, tin, iron, and lead, certain prices are fixed, amounting, in most cases to a virtual extinction of the right. The clear definition which the law has so recently given to this part of the subject appears to have an important bearing on some of the questions now brought under consideration.

It is also important to keep in view the opinion which has been held that the Crown has no right of entry upon lands of private individuals to search for Royal mines, whether of gold as found in a virgin state or when in combination with the baser metals.

Such being the more prominent points of the legal bearings of the subject, I now proceed to the several different conditions under which it will be necessary to treat with parties whose applications come under one or other of the three classes which you specify as follows, viz.:

1st. Where the gold is found in combination with other metals, the whole of which, with the necessary easements for working, are vested in the Crown.

2d. Where the gold is found in combination with the minerals specified in the Acts of William & Mary, and which are not vested in the Crown.

3d. Where the gold is found in a virgin state, or secreted in rocks, and not in combination with the ores and minerals specified in these Acts, on land where the minerals are not vested in the Crown.

In regard to the first-named class of mines or mineral districts, it is necessary to consider them as being either already under lease or licence, or altogether free and open to new arrangements.

In every case where gold is found in combination with another mineral which is already under lease at a proportional royalty, I recommend that licences be granted enabling such lessee to extract gold at the same proportional royalty as has hitherto been payable under existing leases, and this in some cases may be a fair and reasonable rate; but I would also recommend, that upon any special cause being shown, the royalty on gold might be reduced; and in many cases I am of opinion that a royalty of one-twentieth part of the gold extracted would be more advantageous than a higher royalty, by affording encouragement to work mineral veins producing a small quantity of gold, the profit upon which may enable the mine adventurer to make larger excavations, and to obtain other ores than gold, but which without this aid might be wholly unproductive as well to the Crown as to the mine adventurer; and it is in this department of mining that I anticipate most benefit, from the recent improvements in extracting small quantities of gold.

In such cases, then, I recommend, in the first instance, the adoption of already existing royalties; and, upon due cause shown, a reduction of the same, varying as the circumstances may require, down to a minimum royalty of one-twentieth. The applications made for such reduced rate of royalty should be made on a proper schedule; and if gold mining should become extensive and important, the detailed information thus obtained would be of great use, and result in a much more satisfactory state of information than is now existing on this peculiar description of mining adventure.

As regards mines not under lease, it is obvious that the same principle would apply; the proper and usual royalty for the baser metal being the guide in the first instance, until due cause appeared for a reduction. If gold-finding is to prove so profitable as many parties suppose, the ordinary mineral duties will not press; but if the quantity and value of the gold is small in proportion to the cost of extraction and separation, as in very many cases it will, then it certainly would be well to afford encouragement with a view to the general results of obtaining other metals, rather than of gold singly.

As regards the second class of cases, where gold is found in combination with certain other minerals which are not vested in the Crown, it is clear that great and almost insuperable difficulty must attend any attempt to carry out on a large scale the pre-emption powers possessed by the Crown, while on the other hand it would be desirable to free mine adventurers from the risk of being subjected to proceedings in relation thereto. I am of opinion, therefore, that it is highly desirable that a fixed commutation should be made applying to all cases where gold is separated from such other minerals; but as a general royalty on all gold so separated would include cases under as well as above what may be called the pre-emption value of the ores, such proportionate royalty ought not, in my opinion, to be more than one-twentieth, or five per cent. value of the gold so produced.

In the third class, where gold is found in a virgin state or secreted in rocks, and not in combination with the ores and minerals specified in the Acts already referred to, and where the minerals generally are not vested in the Crown, it appears difficult to assign any reason for applying a uniform royalty in all cases. It is quite true that there may be great variety as regards the success of such adventures, but then some may be merely surface operations and others requiring drainage drainage by expensive machinery. Considering that the Crown has not the right to enter upon lands, however promising they may appear for gold, and that the grantee must make terms with the owner of the land, I do not think that in any such case a higher duty than 1-12th should be fixed, while in many cases a lower amount, as far as 1-20th, may be more suitable to the general conditions.

Although I am of opinion that gold-finding when it comes into operation on a large scale will be attended with great uncertainty and with a large cost, and that a moderate royalty will be found indispensable, I beg to suggest the propriety of demanding a larger amount of annual rent, not only as a safeguard against improvident adventurers, but as necessary to repay the additional cost involved by such arrangements, and for which I consider 1 l. a year is wholly inadequate. The period for which licences or leases are granted might be made 10 or 21 years, and as an application for the latter term implies a greater importance, I recommend an annual fixed payment of 10 l. in 10-year licences, and of 20 l. for the longer period; I also advise that an annual report and plan be delivered by the lessees, with a reference plan on one sheet of the Ordnance map where completed, or on some map or plan of one inch to a mile, with a proper sectional plan of the excavations, if any. With these additions, the several clauses in the licence which accompanies your letter appear calculated to effect all that can fairly be required.

It will, I think, be apparent that I have been desirous to consider the subject with due regard to the interests of mining adventurers as well as of the Crown. Any attempt to impose very stringent conditions or high royalties would only tend to discourage adventures, which, under liberal treatment, may benefit all parties concerned; at the same time I would beg to observe, that in affording reasonable encouragement by moderate royalties, it appears absolutely necessary to place some limit on the excitement of mere speculation, and I think it will be admitted that if sufficient inducements do not exist to warrant an annual outlay of 10 l. or 20 l., it would not be worth while to occupy official persons or to intrude on private grounds.

I have, &c.
